Protect Your Company With A Modern Contract Review Process

A poorly drafted contract increases the odds that a problem on a project or a problematic project itself may jeopardize the wellbeing of a contractor's business. It is imperative that the contract is structured in a way that considers the future implications that a bad project may have on the business and its bottom line. But how can you ensure that the contract is up to this task? With a modern contract review process.

Recent history has shown that new and unanticipated risks can arise overnight. In the current economic climate, project delays caused by supply chain disruptions, material shortages, and subcontractor default can threaten the viability of a contractor and its projects. Unfortunately, too many contractors rely on outdated contract documents and insurance forms that do not reflect changing economic realities or shifts in the insurance and legal landscapes. This "set it and forget it" approach can leave a contractor exposed to evolving risks that should be addressed on an ongoing basis.

Protect Your Company's Health: Cyber Coverage & Hygiene

As cybersecurity attacks occur every day, those organizations that are prepared before an attack are more likely to overcome a possible breach. Building a response plan, implementing security channels, and training employees can help mitigate cybersecurity risks and keep your company secure. This article presents types of coverages offered, different phishing attacks of which to be aware, and best practices for good cyber hygiene.

The Changing Landscape of Cyber Liability Requirements

The cyber liability insurance landscape has changed significantly over the past few years. Coverage is now largely a stand-alone insurance product rather than something that is embedded with other coverages. Though there is heightened scrutiny by insurance carriers, more organizations are realizing they need coverage or are being required by customers (similar to general liability insurance).

Additionally, the cyber liability requirements to maintain or receive cyber coverage have changed significantly in the last 12 months. Cyber insurance carriers continue to tighten their underwriting parameters and seek more detail to better understand the organization in which they are insuring, with a narrow focus on multi-factor authentication (MFA), network backup procedures, endpoint detection, and employee cyber awareness training (occurring at least annually).

TAKE THE PLEDGE

CFMA Greater Cincinnati Chapter would like all of its member companies to take the Construction Industry Alliance for Suicide Prevention's (CIASP's) pledge to STAND up for suicide prevention. When a company pledges to STAND up for suicide prevention, it is promising to create safe cultures, provide training to identify and help those at risk, raise awareness about the suicide crisis in construction, normalize conversations around suicide and mental health, and ultimately, decrease the risks associated with suicide in construction.

CCIFP is in need of volunteers to moderate study groups. CCIFP candidates band together to set study times and present topics. The moderators also add color to the topics, and make sure things stay on track.
