CHAIRMAN'S Message

Last year, in his Chairman's Message, then Past Chairman Joe Burkett talked about the challenges of developing and creating a new Strategic Plan. During my year in office, our focus was on implementing that plan. Implementation is not a one-year process; it's a continuous effort that entails a consistent and insistent vision for the future of CFMA, using the Strategic Plan as a road map.

Throughout the initial implementation process we focused on best use of our resources, continuing to build strong relationships with our business partners, increased chapter support, and value to members. It involved trying new things, stepping out of our comfort zone, and the idea that change had to be our new constant. If we're not changing, we're stagnant, which is far worse.

Our first change was removing Increased Membership as a separate goal. It was an important move because CFMA has never been focused on membership count alone. Our focal point has been, and always will be, about increasing member value. The leadership's view is that, if we increase value, our membership will grow. And we have actually started to see that happen over this past year.

Additionally, through the tireless efforts of HQ staff and the Website Task Force, CFMA launched a brand new website in the fall of 2012, which features great benefits such as easier navigation, customization based on user profiles, and mobile compatibility. Although it is still a work in progress, we are thrilled with how far the website has come over the past few months.

One of my thoughts in implementing our new Strategic Plan was to get all of our leadership – our Executive Committee, our Committee Chairs, and our Chapter Presidents – rowing in unison. That is why, for the first time, we held orientation calls for each of these groups where a major emphasis was to introduce our new Strategic Plan, and we created committee charters that tied back to the Strategic Plan, so that we all had the same foundation and focus. The calls proved to be particularly useful and I am so pleased to see that Pat Cebelak, our current Chairman, has not only conducted these orientations again, but vastly improved upon them! Continuity and consistency are good things.

At last year's Conference, we introduced three new ideas – all of which we are carrying forward this year. First, we held a Large-Firm CFO Roundtable attended by more than 100 CFOs of general contractors and subcontractors. We also introduced Pathable, a social media app that helped attendees and exhibitors network with one another. And finally, we had a Fun Run for charity that allowed us to give back to the local community of Orlando, FL.

One of the other major changes in our Strategic Plan was to focus on External Recognition. Turn to page two of this Annual Report to read President & CEO Stuart Binstock's message where he discusses our efforts in this endeavor.

As I reflect on my year as Chairman, one thing is crystal clear: It takes an army of committed and relentless volunteers, committees, chapters, and HQ staff to drive CFMA forward in an industry that is ever-changing. I am grateful beyond words to my fellow Officers, Stuart Binstock, our Executive Committee, and everyone at HQ for their dedication, expertise and support along the way. I will always treasure my time as Chairman. Thank you for allowing me to serve our great Association.

CEO'SMessage

STUART BINSTOCK PRESIDENT & CEO sbinstock@cfma.org 609-945-2429

As Chairman Erika Urbani mentioned in her message on the previous page, my comments will focus on the External Recognition piece of our Strategic Plan. The resources invested in this area have been focused on increasing CFMA's recognition throughout the construction industry. Last year, at our Annual Conference in Orlando, we unveiled a video that visually presented what our new Strategic Plan is all about. At its core, one of the major goals was to lead CEOs of construction companies to turn to their financial staff and ask, "Are you a member of CFMA? If not, why not?" That premise underlies all of our efforts under our External Recognition goal.

So, here's what we've been doing to accomplish that. CFMA has substantially increased its partnerships with other industry associations over the past year. These efforts include partnering with:

Associated Builders and Contractors

Association of Equipment Management Professionals

American Subcontractors Association

National Association of Surety Bond Producers

National Electrical Contractors Association

We have also maintained, and in several cases strengthened, our existing relationships with the Institute of Certified Construction Industry Financial Professionals, the International Risk Management Institute, and the Associated General Contractors of America.

Our collective efforts in this area have increased CFMA's exposure throughout the construction industry, which increases our clout, our reputation, and even membership. A number of these efforts have generated additional interest in CFMA's educational programs.

The work of our Emerging Issues Committee supports our goal of being a leading advocate for financial issues that impact the industry. Over the past year, we have commented on several key regulatory issues, including Liquidity Risk and Interest Rate Risk, Variable Consideration, Private Company Decision-Making Framework, Disclosure Framework, and AICPA's Financial Reporting Framework for Small- to Medium-Sized Entities.

And, finally in the area of External Recognition we have worked hard to cultivate relationships with construction-specific media. As a result, we now receive regular coverage in Engineering News-Record on a quarterly basis reporting on CONFINDEX, and our 2012 Annual Conference was covered in the July 16, 2012 issue, a first for CFMA! In addition, Construction Business Owner magazine regularly covers CFMA activities in its publication.

Finally, I would be remiss if I did not mention our Principal Partner Program. In 2012, we spent a substantial amount of time researching this idea, communicating regularly with all of our existing sponsors, and conducting a series of conference calls with potential sponsors. This culminated in an agreement with Viewpoint Construction Software to be our first Principal Partner beginning on January 1, 2013. This program, still in its infancy, is simply a way to increase non-dues revenues for the organization. Along with our agreement with Sage Software, this program positions CFMA to avoid potential dues increases for years to come. It is important to note that we are hopeful that other sponsors will see the value of this program, and I look forward to introducing our members to additional Principal Partners in the year to come.

I am confident that you will recognize and begin to experience the positive results from our efforts this past year. As always, I encourage you to reach out to me and tell me how we can continue to deliver more value to your membership.

Thank you to our dedicated Officers and Executive Committee. Your commitment, passion, and experience have provided invaluable guidance and insight to keep CFMA at the forefront of the industry.
